GEN, BANKS'S PLAN.—Early in May Last, the Hon, N. P. Banks, then residing in this city, came into the Tribune sanchan to see our tight despatches. In the course of conversation, which turned on the rebellion, Mr. Banks expressed himself substantially as fellows: This robellion cannot he put down by the force which the Government has now called out. Seventy five thousand milita will prove wholly inadequate to restore peace to the country.

The Government and, he feared, the people of the loyal States immensely underrated the strength and means which the rebel chiefs can command. This is a rebellion of the slave power against a republican form of government. That political element which has been strong erough to rule this nation for fifty years cannet be reduced to subjection to the Constitution by a few regiments of militia. Before this gigantic clave-holders' conspiracy can be crushed, it will tax to the utmost the power and endurance of the nation.

The people will have to put forth an effort which has no pirallel in modern times. He regarded this as the most formidable as well as atrocious rebellion which had occurred since the Middle Ages. The Sepoy insurrection was no circumstance to it, either in strength or wickedness. The Sepoys did not revolt for the purpose strangling free governments and setting up a lave despotism, as the authors of the secession rebellion have done. The Sepoys were reduced to obedience in a few months by lees than 80,000 British troops. Four times that many will not suffice to crush out that slaveholders' revolt against the Union. If he was at the head of public affairs, he would call out fire hundred thou and note for the war. He would charter every merchant steamer and slip it for naval sorvice. As soon as the army was equipped and prepared navels on work he would charter overy Statement of the Condition of the Fulton Fire Iusurance Company of New York City on the 30th day of June, 1861. As soon as thearing was equipped and prepared on march, he would start one column of 159,000 nen from Washington to Richmond. Simultaneously he would involve another column of 100,000 Western men down the Misslesippi to reach Mamphis Lutha time the Viviance. demphis by the time the Eastern army got in dichmond. He would rend a division of 50,000 hen from Louisville to Nashville, to support and rotect the Union men of Central and Eastern Tennesses and the mountain country of Georgia, labums, and North Carolina. Hatore these columns moved, he would fit out an expedition by by sea, and place 50,000 soldiers aboard the these on to Galreston. This would keep the rebels at some in the coast States, as they would be in containing the coast States, as they would be in containing the coast States, as they would be in containing the coast States, as they would be in containing the coast States, as they would be in containing the coast States, as they would be in containing the coast States, as they would be in containing the coast States, as they would be in containing the coast States, as they would be in containing the coast States, as they would be in contained to the coast States, as they would be in contained to the coast States, as they would be in contained to the coast States, as they would be in contained to the coast States, as they would be in contained to the coast States, as they would be in contained to the coast States, as they would be in contained to the coast States, as they would be in contained to the coast States, as they would be in contained to the coast States, as they would be in contained to the coast States, as they would be in contained to the coast States, as they would be in contained to the coast States and the coast States are contained to the coast States and the coast States are contained to the coast States and the coast States are contained to the coa BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS. He had been employed in the shops of the North Carolina Railroad, between Weldon and Charlotte, for some time, but grew uneasy in consequence of having been hauled up hefore the Vigilance Committees three times on suspicion of being a Union man. He states that there are but a few Union inen in North Carolina, and they live with a balter round their necks. The Southerners where he resided knew all about how the Manassas lattle would come off five days before it resilty took place, and the North Carolina Central Railroad passed 8,000 Georgia, Alabama, and South Carolina troops North just before it look place. Our informant states that were it not for the Yankees, who are working at the South, the rehels would never get along at all. Out of 40 engineers on the N. C. C. railroad, nearly every man was a Yankee. Then, too, the Yankees make all their ammunition and do severything requiring mechanical skill. Our informant escaped by going Sonth from North Carolina to Stephenson, Alahama, and from thence to Nashville. He then crossed over to Kentucky and reached Louis ville in safety. There is an encampment, mainly of arrillery forces, at a place called Big Shanty, along twonty miles from Atlanta, Ga. There it also another rebel encampment of several thousand troops at Murfree-boro, Tenn. Scession has tripes first met bis gaze. He was informed that millious of dellars would be spent to irduce Kentucky to go out of the Union, but from all he could learn Kentucky would remain under the stars and stripes.

Message from the Sec - Cur readers may have observed recordly, among our maritime extracts, the copy of the centerts of a slip of paper found in a bottle some works ago on the western crease of Uist, in the Hebrides, and forwards to us by our agont 2.85 ornowny. The paper in question, apparently the leaf of a pecket book, used in the hurry of the nument, was covered on both sides with pencil or rks, from which the following was with difficulty deciphered: "On board the Pacific, from Liverpool to New York. Great confusion on loard, Icherga aron due on every side, Ik tow I cannot escape. I write the cause of our less that friends may not live in suspense. The finder of this will please get it published. Wm. Gratham." If we are right in our conjecture, the ship here named is the Pacific, one of the Collins line of steamers, which ves el left Liverpool on January 28. 1866, three days before the Parsia, and has not ince been heard of; and this slip of paper, three inches by two, is probably the only record of the fate of that missing ship. Many a farmer has puzzled himself over certain phenomena that were constantly coming within the range of his experience, but for which he has found it difficult to account For instance, he knows that wherever a pile of brush has been left carelessly in the lield during the summer, the grass that springs heneath it and makes its way through the tangle home in the coast States, as they would be in constant dread of a visit at every port, not knowing where the feet might land the army. This force on shiphoard, Mr. Banks thought, would compel to remain in their own States, four times the men in the expelition. It would be a movable column which, he the sid of wind and steam, might be off Charleston to-day, and land at Savanuah to morrow. Hence its power and efficiency.

The remaining 159,000 he would distribute in divisions at Washington, New York, St. Louis, Battimore, and other points to act as reserves and supports wherever the exigencies of the cannot and supports wherever the exigencies of the cannot be need them. He would keep recruiting offices open wherever a regiment had been raised, to fill the vacancies in the rawle caused hy hattle or sickness. He would call on the people to organize a National Home times that the first half million were not able to crush out the four rebellen.

Ils calculated that Richmond, Nashville, and Memphis could be occupied hefore the frosts of autumn, and that during the winler campalgin Memphis could be occupied before the frosts of autumn, and that during the winter campalign the two main armies would move southward, one along the Atlantic stepe and the other down the Mississippi. By next spring, be thought, the Stars and Stripes might be waving over the Crescent City, and even Mostgomery—the then capital of the robels.

At this first corner the father halted as the son rode on. The father called to his son Alfred that they were all wrong and must turn hack. The youth turned back, and had returned only a few paces when he received a violent hlow, and looked up to see his father advancing on him with something uplified in his hand to strike again. The second blow fell, the youth's hat was off, and hostered borse rose to intercept on its own head the third blow, and at that moment a laboring man and woman came round the opposite corner.

The man, John Rivers, saw the elder strike the younger on the forehead with something which he took to be a whip handle that glittered at the end. The youth hisping off his horse, rushed to the feet of the woman for protection. Close by was John Evans, a hargeman, to whom the son next clung, crying, "Help me! Protect me! Save me!" When the youth was questioned, he saw his father looking intentity at him, asying some thing about a wall and a fall. John Everett, and ther laborer, came up, and, seeing the wounded to the air or wither laborer, came up, and, seeing the wounded to the air or with the condition of the reasons that the bore asked, "How did it happen?" The father replied that the young gentleman had stood up in his saddle to look over a wall, that the horse reased, and so he tell. To Evans he said that the horse shied and threw the boy against the wall.

For a week the Boron de Vidil lived as usual at the Clarendon. In the mean time the son had told his story, and inspector Thornton of the detective force had found the evidence in confirmation. At the begianing of this week the Baron was a fugitive, and the detectives are upon his track in Paris.

But here we have to estimate droute and an exhaustive summer sun. We must therefore plow deep to retain moisture, long as it is possible for him to do so in every rotation. He ought to have a larger breadth of land at all times in grass and clover, and may be pursued to some extent with advan-tage. But here we have to estitud against drouth and an exhaustive summer sun. Well rotted manure should be applied to sandy soils for this purpose. The soil needs compressing, and well rotted manure is a very efficient agent for this purpose. On still, tenacious soils, the strawy manure is what is wanted. It renders them more open and friable, admits the free passage of rain and atmosphere, and in a variety of ways promotes fertility and easier management. FOUGHT BETWEEN GEN. ROSECRANS AND WISE.

Tha steamer Ida May arrived at Cincinnati yesterday from Point Pleasant, Virginia. The Cincionati Commercial says that at that point and at all the towns along the river, there wes a report, believed to be true, that Gen. Rosecrars. had intercepted the rebel forces under Gen. Wise at a place 20 miles beyond Gauley Bridge, and dcfeated him in a hard fought battle. The reported rebel loss was fifteen hundred and that of the Federal forces only five hundred. The riport at all the towns above Ironton was brought by a Mr. Ilailiour from the camp of Gen. Cox at Gaulay Bridge. This gentleman, who is said to be a rchant of respectability and influence at Ironion, professes to have seen the despatch from crans to Cox. He also says that after the battle, Wise, finding his condition desperate, surrendered himself and all his forces prisoners of rebel deserter teld the same story. This news s believed along the Virginia shore.

A DESCRIPTION DETERMINED SUCCIDE. -A reigner named Frank Howard, who seems to have had no relations in this country, perpetrated a most desperate suicide near Eaton, Ohio, on the 31st ultimo. 11e went to the barn, set it on fire, and after the fire hall got a fair start, with the intention of removing every trace of himself, he cut his throat with his razor, end immediately threw himself into the fire. But loss of blood did not assuage the pain of burning. Human nature could not endure it; and, with his clothes burned off and his tleeh literally on fire, he jumped into a well, that drowning might take the place of burn rant. Own bond in $200 for twelve months of ing. In this condition his dead body was found.

NAPOLEON ON TRAINED SOLDIERS -The ad vocates of the "Forward to Richmond" policy have been in the habit of quoting Napoleon the First as soving that three mouths training for oldiers was as good as three years. Such nonmes put in the mouth of the great conquere might well make him "lurn in his coffin." Allis in, in his History of Nepoleon, cites his language in discussing the question of how much time is required to make a reliable soldier. In a Two Men Killed by Lightning -During conversation respecting the naval conscription

Much longer time is required to form a sailor than a coldier. The latter may be trained in all his duties in six months.

Napoleon replied:
Thera never was so great a mistake. Nothing can be more dangerous than 10 propagate such opinions. If acted upon, they would speedily lead to the dissolution of the army. At Jemappe, there were 50,000 French against '9,000 Austrians. During the first four years of the war, all the heatile operations were conducted in the most ridiculous manner. It was neither the volunteers nor the recruits who saved the republic; it was the 180,000 old troeps of the monarchy, and the discharged veterans whom the revolution impelled to the frontier. Part of the recruits deserted, part died; a small portion only remained, who, in the process of time, formed good soldiers. Why have the Homans done such great things? Because six years instruction were, with them, required to make a soldier. A legion compused of three thousand such men was worth thirty thousand ordinary troops. With tifteen thousand such men as the Gaards, I would everywhere heat forty thonsand. You will not find me engaged soon in war with an army of recruits. Napoleon replied:

It has been admitted by the enemy, that with their defeat at Manassas, the rebel cause would have been lost beyord redomption. They had accordingly etrained every nerve, and had well nigh exhausted the active figheim; elements of the revolved States in their preparations for a desperate struggle in this first grand encounter. They have ascered the advantages and the presenter of an unexpected victory, and vet, comparatively, they are weaker in the field to day thus they were a month ago. We have it from various intelligent resources that the cream of the warlike population of our rebellions "Confederate States" has already been drawn off—that the rebel armise of two hundred and fifty thousand men now in the field have left but a scanty margin for reinfurcements, and that henceforth they n for reinforcements, and that henceforth they ust be drawn almost exclusively from the "poor hites," whose necessities place them in opport to slave labor, and who, therefore, feel ve ttle interest in a war undertaken for the exclu-ive object of an unmixed pro-slavery despotism. On the other hind, our Congress has provided the way and means not only for raising, but for comfortably dothing and subsisting a well appointed and theroughly opinped Union army of half a million of main. This army cen be raised and fully prepared for active operations by the middle of October. It should be thus made ready, in conjunction with a powerful navy and numerous transperts, for offensive inroads slong our Southern seaboard. Then, with a column of two hundred thousand, or of one hundred and fifty thousand men, moving southward from the Potomac and the Chesapouke Bey, and with a column of ore bundred and fifty thousand moving down the Mississippi, we may keep albut a marine column of fifty thousand moving down the Mississippi, we may keep albut a marine column of fifty thousand men for can board enterprises at such points as Charleston, Savannah, and Mobile, and still hold one hundred and fifty thousand men for gerison duty and for reserves. Thus, with a single decisive battle, in Virginia all the honder have Sates. arest and fifty thousand men for gerrison duty and for reserves. Thus, with a single decisive battle in Virginia, all the bender rlave State-may be wheeled into line with the loyal State-of the North, and from Missouri, Keutucky, Fen-ressee, Virginia, and Maryland a co-operative column of another hundred thousand Union vol intoers may be added to our military strong before December.

Reduced to this extremity, it will be no difficult matter to bring back the cotton States to 1

ble-sings of the best government in the wor within a very short time. In a word, upon sor such plan as this we have indicated, we can as we must put an end to this rebellion by the fir-of May.
